don 1 July All Jack Carter Reveals Inflation Plan, Sees Austerity

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP) - President Carter unveiled a largely voluntary new set of wage and price guidelines last night and pleaded with the nation "to give this plan a chance to work."

We must face a time of national austerity." Mr. Carter said in remarks prepared for a speech broadcast to the nation. "Hard choices are necessity." Included by the sary if we want to avoid consequences that are even worse."

The president set a guideline of 7 measure a very force. The president set a guideline of 7 percent in 1979 for increases in wages ino in but half of and fringe benefits and a complex price guideline aimed at holding inthe state of the s creases to approximately 5.75 percent next year. Mr. Carter said that if the program is successful this would translate into an inflation rate of between 6 percent and 6.5 percent in the next year, well below the current rate of about 8 percent.

He said he would ask Congress to enact tax rebates for workers who comply with the 7 percent wage guide and who would suffer if inflation exceeds that level. Mr. Carter called it "real wage insurance." As part of his assault on inflation, which the president said would be his administration's No. 1 domestic priority in the coming year, Mr. Carter

- To cut the federal deficit to $30 billion or less next year. To fill only one of every two new job vacancies in the government for
- "an indefinite period." • To "oppose any further reduction in federal income taxes until we
- have convincing prospects that inflation will be controlled."

   To seek legislation bringing increased competition in the railroad and trucking industries. Earlier today, the president signed into law a stand a de measure that will phase out federal regulation of air fares.

  Mr. Carter's wage guideline is intended to limit both wages and benefits to an average of 7 percent a year for all workers except those making less than $4 an hour. Those persons will be exempted from the program. Also exempted are future pay raises that have already been written into

"From tonight on, every contract signed and every pay raise granted should meet this standard," the president said.

The price guideline is somewhat more complex. It seeks to limit the average price increase for a firm's product line to 0.5 percent less than the average for its price increases in 1976 and 1977.

Mr. Carter's advisers figure that this would result in price increases throughout the economy of roughly 5.75 percent a year. But they expect it to cut the inflation rate to only about 6 percent to 6.5 percent, because there will be exceptions for firms with "unavoidable" cost increases. Such an exception would be made, for example, for a firm that has an existing wage contract committing it to granting pay raises above the 7-percent

"This is a standard for everyone to follow. Everyone," Mr. Carter said. "As far as I am concerned, every business, every union, every professional group, every individual in this country has no excuse not to adhere to these standards. If we meet these standards, the real buying power of your paycheck will rise."

Although the president declared no exceptions, Mr. Carter's chief economic adviser, Charles Schultze, said, "We're not interested in Mom and Pop stores. We're zeroing in on larger parts of the economy where there is INTENSIVERE a concentration of economic power." Although the price guidelines will be mainly voluntary, there are some incentives for compliance. Firms seeking federal contracts of $5 million or more will be required to Clashes also were reported in Qom. (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

The Russians have been critical of Mr. Carter's decision to keep open the option of full production of neutron weapons. Some U.S. analysts believe that Mr. Carter made the decision in order to reassure West Europeans, while still working toward a SALT agreement with the Soviet Union.

The neutron weapon is a small warbead that produces twice the deadly radiation of a conventional nuclear bomb but less than a tenth as much explosive power, and heat. This means that the warhead can kill people while causing little damage to buildings.

The prime minister's aides did not deny that Mr. Begin might seek amendments, changes and addi-tions to the peace draft, something President Anwar Sadat of Egypt has already instructed his negotiators to do. Mr. Begin has yet to make his position known to the Is-raeli Cabinet on the draft document aimed at ending three dec-ades of bloodshed and enmity between the two countries.

But a number of Cabinet minis-ters — particularly those on the right of Mr. Begin's coalition government - have been voicing doubts about the draft treaty because of what has been labeled the issue of "linkage."

The term refers to Israel's reluctance to have the peace pact with Egypt linked with the issue of the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip. The Israelis claim that at the Camp David summit talks the two accords agreed upon by Mr. Sadat and Mr. Begin - nne dealing with the framework of an overall Middle East peace, the other with the framework of an Egyptian-Israeli settlement — pre-eluded such a linkage.

Mr. Assad's visit to Baghdad was seen as a major step toward relaxing one of the Arab world's bitterest disputes.

The trip, termed "a working visit" and expected to last two days, will be followed by another visit by Mr. Assad to Baghdad for an Arab summit meeting scheduled to begin Nov. 2.

The Syria-Iraq reconciliation, whether lasting or not, was seen by Arab analysts as a measure of the importance both nations attach to closing Arab ranks in order to counter current U.S.-backed Middle East peace moves following the Camp David summit.

The split between the Syman and Iraqí Ba'ath parties dates back to 1966, when the "military" wing in Damascus led by Gen. Salah Jedid rebelled against the pan-Arab political command, including Ba'ath party founder Michel Aflak, and drove them out of Syria.

Mr. Aflak, who took refuge in Iraq, was accepted as leader of the Iraqí Ba'athists, who had seized power in Baghdad in 1963. Iraq declared the Ba'ath faction in Damascus "illegitimate." The Syrians, in turn, charged Iraq, and Mr. Aflak with "revisionism" and "deviation" from the original party

France Announces U.K. Airbus Accord

French Transport Ministry announced today that Britain will join France and West Germany in building a new all-European medium-range passenger aircraft to compete against U.S. designs in what has been termed "the airliner battle of the century." A government spokesman said in London tonight that the French PAR'S WELCOME Transport Ministry had acted pre-maturely today in announcing that Britain would join the European Airbus consortium, Reuters report-

["As far as we are concerned, the Year Para Book announcement is a little bit premature," a spokesman for the Industry Department said. He said that as far as the department knew, "no agreement had been reached" in Paris during talks there on British participation in the Airbus project.

participation, he added.]
The plane that the consortium plans to produce is a smaller, improved 180-seat version of the existing 230-seat European Airbus, recently ordered by Eastern Airlines in the United States and to be called the A310.

The A310, which is expected to be flying by about 1982, will be competing against U.S. passenger jets now being designed by Boeing. McDonnell Douglas and Lockheed for the more than 1.000 new medium-baul passenger air-craft that world airlines are expected to order during the remainder of this century, at a total cost of be-tween $20 billion and $30 billion.

Today's announcement by French Transport Minister Joel le Theule said that Britain's nationalized aircraft manufacturer. British Aerospace Corp., has agreed to join the existing Airbus consortium with a 20 percent share of the equity from next January. At present, British Aerospace is building Airbus wings on a contract basis for the existing Airbus ufacturer MBB-VFW.

Under today's agreement the British government, through British Aerospace, will take an equity stake in both the planned A310 venture and in the existing Airbus construc-tion program. The voting rules inside the consortium are to be changed to give Britain a veto on all major decisions by 1981, along with France and West Germany.

The French Transport Ministry said that Britain has undertaken in today's agreement to "refrain from supporting any participation by Brinsh industry in the development or production of civil aircraft competing with the Airbus consorti-

Carter Reveals Package Of Wage-Price Guidelines

sign a statement that they are in compliance with both wage and price

According to a "fact sheet" issued by the White House, increases above the guidelines would "trigger actions by the government."

These actions could include relaxing restrictions on imports or adjusting federally regulated rate or wage levels.

Mr. Carter said that the federal Council on Wage and Price Stability. which has a staff of about 30 persons, will get 100 additional employees and will monitor all collective bargaining contracts and the prices of the top 400 firms in the nation, those with annual sales of more than $500

"These standards are fair," the president said. "They are standards that everyone can follow. If we do follow them, they will slow prices down—so that wages will not have to chase prices to stay even."

Mr. Carter said that cutting the federal deficit and forgoing future federal income tax cuts would require "national austerity" and "hard

"I intend to make those hard choices," Mr. Carter said, adding that he would continue to veto spending measures if necessary to "keep our nation firmly on the path of fiscal restraint." Mr. Carter said that his limits on federal hiring would mean a reduction of more than 20,000 in the number of permanent federal employees budgeted for this year. However, a rider attached to the recently enacted civil service revision bill requires Mr. Carter to cut the federal workforce by about 30,000 to 40,000 persons. The president appealed to potential critics of his anti-inflation program to give it careful study before attacking it.

"These proposals, which give us a chance, also deserve a chance," he said. "If, tomorrow, or next week, or next month, you ridicule them, ignore them, pick them apart before they have a chance to work, you will have reduced their chance of succeeding."

Mr. Carter said that his program can work, given time, but will not produce any immediate, dramatic cut in the inflation rate.

"If there is one thing that I am asking of every American tonight, it is to give this plan a chance to work — a chance to work for us," the president said.

Main Points of Plan

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP) - Here are the main elements of President Carter's anti-inflation program:

• Pay standard: Annual increases in wages and private fringe benefits are not to exceed an average of 7 percent in new wage contracts. Workers earning less than $4 an hour are exempted.

 Price standard: Individual firms are to limit their price increases over the next year to 0.5 percentage points below the increase during 1976-77. Enforcement: The program is described as voluntary hut companies with government contracts would have to certify that they are following the standards. The government could open that field to foreign competition or tighten other regulations against offenders.

· Compliance: The Council on Wage and Price Stability will look at prices and wages in 400 major industries to monitor compliance. Wage insurance: The president asked Congress for a program of "real wage insurance." Workers who belong to groups that meet the pay standard would get a tax rebate if the rate of inflation exceeds 7 percent. Spending: Mr. Carter promises a tight rein on the growth in federal spending and a limit on federal hiring to filling one out of two vacancies.

A pickup truck, loaded with passengers fleeing from Malibu and their belongings, collided head-on with a car on a smoke-darkened road, killing two persons.

Driven by winds up to 60 mph, flames destroyed 38,000 acres of brush, ent off highways and damaged or destroyed homes and a church. At least five persons were injured, including a fireman at a small fire in San Dimas. A Malibu resident, John Klette, 32, was in critical condition at Sherman Oaks Burn Center with third-degree hurns on 80 percent of his body.

"The situation is — we're op to our eyeballs in fires," a Los Angeles County fire official said. More than 1,500 firemen, backed by retardant-dropping helicopters and planes, tried to contain the fires, with reinforcements headed for Los Angeles from throughout California. A helicopter was forced down by the winds; another crashed but its pilot was unburt.

The largest fire, 30 miles northwest of central Los Angeles — burned 23,000 acres. Fire officials said at least 50 to 60 homes had burned. Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif., who flew over the fire in a helicopter, predicted the toll would be 100 to 200 houses in the

Castro's Comment Hints Shift in Ideology

By George Volsky

HAVANA, Oct 24 (NYT) President Fidel Castro has signaled what appears to be a new ideological direction for the Cuban revolu-tion, which will be 20 years old Jan.

In a statement that could have long-range internal and external political consequences, Mr. Castro declared Saturday: We are not only Marxists-Leninists. We are also nationalists and patriots."

According to observers, such political definition has not been heard here since 1959, when the Cuban revolution was strongly nationalistic and leftist but not yet Marxist-

More Likely to Be Freed

Equally important, the Cuban government, which on Saturday re-leased 46 political prisoners who later that day flew to Miami with 33 members of their families, is ready to release virtually all of the remaining prisoners, possibly be-fore the end of the year. This uni-lateral move was not expected by the exiles.

Mr. Castro's explanation was that the Cuban revolution has become an "irreversible" fact, which he said even his hitter oppooents

Taken together, his rapproche-ment with the exiles, the release of the prisoners, the insistence on the "nationalist and patriotic" traits of the revolution, and a conciliatory posture toward the United States indicate a new, more open policy of the government.
Mr. Castro's statement was made at a news conference attended by a handful of media representatives,

Judge Robinson had been upset at the restrictions the Justice Department was attempting to place on the disclosure of security information in the course of the trial, which opened yesterday with the selection of a jury of eight women and four men. The department has accused Mr. Berrellez of lying before a Senate subcommittee five years ago about assertions that the CIA and ITT had joined in 1970 to try to block the election of Salvador Alleade, a U.S. District Judge Auhrey Robinson Jr. gave government prosecutors until Monday morning to decide whether to go on with the against Mr. Berrellez.

They concern meetings of ITT official Harold Hendrix, an unindicted co-conspirator, with a cer-tain CIA agent and with Hernan Cuhillos, a former Chilean newspa-per executive who is now Chile's foreign minister.

Mr. Fischer, the Defense Minis-try spokesman, said plans for large-scale war games next fall are largely completed, so that any changes in the maneuver schedule would not come before 1980. Any West German plan to alter the time schedule would have to be approved by Gen. Haig's headquarters in Belgium.

Suarez Nudging Centrists Leftward to Fortify Party

By James M. Markham

MADRID, Oct. 24 (NYT) — A tragedy of modern Spanish history has been the incapacity of the middle classes to organize themselves into a coherent political party. Last weekend Premier Adolfo Suarez and a band of young collaborators once again took on this vital task as the governing Union of the Democratic Center held its first national

For a coalition that has, nominally at least, been governing Spain for 16 months, it was a bit late for the sometimes quarrelsome hunch of self-styled Liberals, Social Dem-ocrats, Christian Democrats and one-time Franco loyalists to be forging themselves into a political party. But the three days of discus-sions in Madrid's vaulting Palace of Congresses seemed to have a double goal: to consolidate the party and to poise it for general elec-tions that Mr. Suarez may feel he has to call early oext year.

A man who came out of Franco's National Movement, Mr. Suarez, 46, has been steadily moving toward what might be called the left wing of his party, collecting around him a team of friends and young politicos who seem to feel that only a party that appears "modern" and "European" and "forward-looking" can become the arbiter of Spanish democracy.

Treasury Minister Francisco Ordonez or Public Works Minister Joaquin Garrigues Walker - and the dissatisfied have been the rather conservative Christian Democrats, who themselves once aspired to be the begemonic force in the new Spanish politics on the model of the older, Italian system.

At the weekend congress, the few moments of tension arose when Christian Democratic elements entered strident notes that ruffled the energetic, but essentially bland and soothing, tooe that Mr. Suarez gives to his public interventions and the party he has created. Thus the mayor of Madrid, Jose

Luis Alvarez, a Christian Demo-crat, surprised and angered some and enthused a minority - by delivering a ringing attack on the Spanish left, asserting that it was "the center" alone that brought democracy to Spain and forgetting, it seemed, that men such as Mr. Or-donez and Mr. Garrigues Walker were in the "opposinoo" when Mr. Suarez was named premier in the summer of 1976. And, when the time came to vote, almost a third of the 1,700 delegates abstained or cast blank votes on the party's executive and political committees, which had been picked by the pre-

Their allies in this gamble tend to be the so-called Social Democrats and the Liberals — men like that, at bottom, it has nowhere to go if it wants to share the fruits of power, and Christian Democrats have been placed in the Union of the Democratic Center's important committees and ministries.

> To the party's right lies the small, oco-Francoite Popular Alliance, which some Christian Democrats consider an eventual coalition partoer. But Mr. Suarez and his men seem for the moment to have rejected the thought of a government al-liance to their right. Their preoccupation is the second-ranking Socialists from whom they hope to divert votes and, should it one day become necessary, with whom they might consider forming a government coalition.

This analysis rests on an assump tion that a controlling sector of the Spanish electorate has, during the Franco years of forced-march mdustrialization, become "middle class" in its perceptions, if oot al-ways in its income levels. It is to this vague and shifting group of voters that Mr. Suarez and the Socialist leaders beam their rather similar messages of progress, change and stability. In the government party, the opposition to this line comes from the right; within the Socialists, from a leftist, Marxto persuade Spain's money men, who in some instances are identified with the Christian Democratic position, to join his team.

A solidly entrenched centrist party, repesenting Spain's rich and middle classes, clearly needs steady financial backing, and there is nothing like longevity in power to bring the money around.

Sometime next month, after Spain's new constitution is approved in a popular referendum. Parliament will have the power to vote Mr. Suarez out of office something it has not had up to now. The premier leads a minority government — he can probably count on only 162 seats in the 350member lower house - and he will have to fish around for allies to keep himself in office.

'Progress' for SALT

After two days of discussion in Moscow, the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks remain decorated with such words as "constructive," "useful," "cordial" and "friendly." But no treaty has yet emerged from this inconclusively cheery atmosphere. That, of course, could be (and among some observers is) considered reason for skepticism. But when one considers how powerful the central issue of SALT remains, and how complicated and often nebulous so many of the details involved are by their very nature, to say nothing of the depth of emotions any rivalry between Moscow and Washington must plumb, it is still worth being thankful for the good signs in the talks and hopeful about their ultimate conclusion.

Weapons of war, especially when little exposed to combat, are extremely difficult to appraise, whether to assess chances of victory in war or restrictions for peace. When World War II was thrust on humanity by Adolf Hitler, the French Army was generally considered the best in the world. Among other advantages, it had a very large number of tanks, superior to those of the Germans. But the Germans had read, among others, the writings of Charles de Gaulle on the new warfare; they were able to create a Blitzkrieg and sweep from the Rhine to the sea. The French largely ignored the warnings and the predictions of De Gaulle — and were beaten in the field. So it is not necessarily the number or kinds of weapons that reside in a governmental arsenal that will tell how a war will end, or how each can be balanced off against others. How will they be used? How successful will they be in action?

Moreover, there are political issues that can have decisive effect on total war. Had Hitler refrained from attacking the Soviet Union, he could have dominated Western Europe. Had he appealed to revolutionaries within the Soviet Union — who did supply some of his troops - he might have extended his rule to Vladivostok. And had the United States stayed aloof, he might have won.

The strategic arms over which Moscow and Washington have been arguing leave many questions that could not be answered except in war.

It is not only the layman who is baffled by the relative effectiveness of Cruise missiles and Backfire bombers. One rather interesting example of how the Carter administration is trying to simplify the issues is by the departure of Paul Warnke. The effect of his move is to deprive anti-SALT spokesmen in the United States of the power of characterizing the SALT agreements with Mr. Warnke's strong desire to limit arms and maintain detente, even though the policy he advocated may remain intact.

A more constructive position by the Carteradministration might be to point out just how relatively new, and increasingly sharp, differences within what was once Stalin's monolithic empire have raised military problems for the Soviet Union. The "Chinese card" (which is in the game whether the Americans choose to play it or not) is only the most important of these; Soviet expansionism in Africa is another, which Moscow would do well to return to the deck. Admittedly, it is not easy to negotiate with a country whose weaknesses one is pointing out, but the Soviet Union has certainly done this with respect to the United States since Vietnam.

In any case, SALT is important, less for what the specific limitation may imply than for a common acceptance by the superpowers of what war between them would mean for the world. There is an acronym m use lately — MAD — which anti-SALT pundits use to play down those effects. It means Mutual Assured Destruction.

Since war on a global scale, conventional or nuclear, involves just such a loss for all, it is madder to use the phrase lightly than to take it with utmost seriousness. And it is wiser to hope for good from SALT than to start with the assumption it is a kind of nuclear Munich. No one can accept Soviet policies, or arms accumulation, as less than a threat to the free world. But in SALT as in so many other aspects of diplomacy, dialogue is preferable to confrontation.

Looking Up in Lebanon

It is possible to say, very cautiously, that things are looking up in Lebanon. Not only is the cease-fire proclaimed earlier this month between Christian militias and Syria's "peacekeeping" forces holding, but it was also substantially strengthened over the weekend when Saudi troops replaced Syrians at key locations in Beirut. The Christians, who broggory brovoked a good Syrian onslaught on them, detest the Syrians but find Saudis acceptable. In return for the switch of peacekeeper, they pledged to cool down. At the same time, Lebanese army units are starting to take up peacekeeping duty in Beirut. Since the ultimate point is to phase out foreign peacekeepers, who have been on hand since the 1975-76 phase of Lebanon's civil war, the entry of Lebanese soldiers has a special appeal.

Underneath the surface, moreover, there are signs of stirring. The Syrians may be losing some of their taste for intervention in Lebanon. For trying to keep the peace in their fashion, they have been roundly condemned for savagely attacking first Palestinians and then Christians. They have been unable to either to fold Lebanon into a Syrian design or to steer Lebanon toward an orderly future of its own. With Egypt and Israel about to make peace. Damascus may feel dangerously exposed to maneuvers by the Israelis and their Lebanese Christian clients. Little wonder that Syria seems ready to step back a pace in Beirut and let other Arabs assume some part of a thankless peacekeeping mission. The Israelis, helping in their fashion, have stepped back a pace, too.

The truly interesting aspect, however, is the role of the great powers. Lebanon is perhaps the only trouble spot going where Moscow and Washington are, if not cooperating, pursuing somewhat parallel policies aimed at stability. The theory that the Russians were e flames in Beirut to undermine Camp David faded when they backed the cease-fire. Frozen out of the Arab-Israeli action, Moscow apparently wants in Lebanon not a wider war but an opportunity to act on a Mideast diplomatic stage.

Jimmy Carter is taking a personal interest in U.S. efforts to calm Lebanon and explore the shape of an internal solution. Vice President Mondale, questioned recently, pointed-ly declined to put blame on Syria, whose co-operation will be crucial to any easing of the poisonous religious, class and personal disputes that make up Lebanon's tragedy. France is also constructively engaged in the quest for stability.

Lebanon has given "cease-fire" a bad name, and this one may hold up no better than its countless predecessors. But somehow we have a sense that the stage - the U.S.-Soviet-French international stage - is set differently this time around, and that the behavior of those directly engaged (Christians and Syrians and to some extent Israelis and Palestinians) may as a consequence be significantly different too.

Ban Skateboards?

If Americans for Democratic Action seems miscast as the scourge of the skateboard, never mind: the play's the thing. What ADA proposes, through its consumer affairs committee, is a nationwide ban on these toys.

We oppose that - and not because there is anything dubious about the ADA panel's Skateboards are involved in thousands of injuries annually, and last year some 25 deaths were attributed to their use. Reason enough for concern, perhaps for safety regulations and even maybe a schools-oriented educational campaign about their hazards.

But an ontright ban, as the ADA consumer affairs committee requests? We say no to that. Automobiles are vastly more dangerous than skateboards. Should they be banned; should they even be restricted to utilitarian use? Who would say yes? The same goes for other risky things: alcohol, swimming pools, power mowers, kitchen step-stools, et cetera ad almost infinitum. Once you start down the banning path, there are lots of possibili-ties besides skateboards.

WASHINGTON - Among establishment health researchers, a mythical entity known as the "disease-of-the-month club" is on a par with escaped viruses, plagiar-ized research and canceled travel grants as an impediment to restful

In his 20 months as secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, cagey Joseph Califano has perceived this publicly as the unrecognized bete noire of research. And, in a newly initiated campaign romake federal health-research programs according to the Califano vision — with the stress on long-term planning, austerity and social ntility — he has shrewdly offered the biomedical community a bargain: Cooperate with me, and, in return, research will, among other benefits, be insulated against the disease-of-the-month club.

For the biomedical savants to whom he recently presented this proposition, there's much appeal in this trade-off, since the "clob" is to them as SALT is to Russophobes and double-digit inflation to pensioners, an abomination that pricks deep fears and unplugs combative bormones. What is the disease-ofthe-month club?

Alarmist Tactics

It is the shorthand term for the often-successful tactic of whipping up public and congressional sentiment to compel the National Insti-tutes of Health to pay some, or more, attention to a disease that does not much appeal to NIH's own scientific fancy. With a hu-manitarian flavor, then it is a porkbarrel play for the government's health-research money. It is policy-making through the use of alarmist tactics, mandlin appeals and political muscle, rather than through cool appraisal of scientific value and "ripeness," which are the criteria that the biomedical high command prefers for deploying resources. As Califano under-stands, the club is anathema to the

Referring to "the inevitable but not always desirable pressures that attend the distribution of substantial research dollars," he sym-pathetically reminded a recent assemblage of health scientists, "You're all familiar with the kind of disease-of-the-month pressures that attend the budget process within HEW and the Congress." None appeared mystified and none objected to the comradely alarm

Nevertheless, some kind words are in order for the club, which, though almost always regarded with disdain, has actually served a useful role in the politics of medical research. For the process, which the establishment fears, and which Califano is nimbly exploiting, simply represents the application of demo-cratic politics to the elitist business of biomedical research.

Nuisance

The club, such as it is, usually consists of people who, through personal misfortune, are concerned with a particular disease, and want their government to try to do something about it. Following the model of hog raisers, bomber builders and other successful agitators for government attention, they engage the services of public-relations specialists, pressure their elected representatives, and generally create a nuisance — until NIH, almost always reluctantly, finally yields and puts some scientists to work on the

As former bishop of Cracow, he embodies and will intensify a poli-cy which has already loosened the grip of Communism in Eastern Europe. Hence his call to "open up frontiers" in his inaugural Mass on

The critical distinction between the new Pope and even his most re-cent predecessors lies in the matter of church and state. Mixing the two came naturally to the Italian popes, the more so as a Catholic party, the Christian Democrats, ruled the roost in Italy since the end of World War II. Only four years ago, Paul VI threw all his prestige and that of the Vatican into a long drawn-out, losing campaign against legalizing divorce in Italy.

Apart

But John Paul II hails from a country where the government was more enemy than friend to the church. Far from wanting to mix the two, he shares with the bishops of northern Europe, who helped make him Pope, an instinct for holding church and state apart. As he said in his first message as Pope: "We have no intention of political interference nor of participation in the working out of temporal affairs."

The most obvious beneficiary of that approach in Italian politics is the Christian Democratic party. Though once helped by the support of local church organizations, the DemoChristians have been increasingly burdened by the anachronis-tic views of the Vatican on such so-cial issues as divorce and contra-

As a result, the DemoChristian share of the Italian vote has sunk steadily from about half in 1948 to just over a third in 1976. Under Premier Ginlio Andreotti, the Christian Democrats now govern as a minority, dependent upon sup-port from the Communists. Short of some inner transformation, the Christian Democrats cannot avoid eventually teaming up with the Communists as coalition partners in the so-called "historic compro-

R OME — The unceasing strug- Vatican withdrawn, the Christian gle between the red and the Democrats now have no good alternative but renovation. They have to adopt more modern social policies and broaden their appeal beyond the peasants and the Catholic mid-dle class. As the Italian editor Eugenio Scalfari wrote the other day,
"Now more than ever, they must become a lay party."

In Eastern Europe, the papacy of John Paul II sets up an opposite effect. For about a dozen years now, the church has followed an Eastern policy, or Ostpolitik, of give and take. While yielding on such issues as exoneration of Cardi-nal Mindszenty, the church has been insisting on its right to preach, teach and exercise moral sway. If the results have been only partly successful in East Germany, Hun-gary and Czechoslovakia, in Poland the policy has been triumphant. Not only has church attendance risen, and the number of seminary students soured. The church has be-come an unofficial opposition to which the government repeatedly nurs for approval.

Ties

Existing ties between the churches of Eastern and Western Europe, moreover, were knitted much more tightly together. Thus alongside Eurocommunism, there has devel-oped a Eurocatholicism.

With the accession of Pope John Paul II, the spread of Western values through the church to Eastern Europe takes on even greater force. The new pope himself is talking about visiting not only Poland but also the Soviet Union. His ascent means that Moscow —faced with a revitalized U.S. president, a tough er Japan, a more active China and a Near East on the road to settlement — has also to cope with a Western Europe capable of renewing itself.

"Father Serge" was written after Tolstoy had been seized by the messianic impulse to preach Christian ideals. There was a legend that Czar Alexander I only feigned death, that at his funeral his coffin was empty and that be had vanished to tramp Russia as a vaga-bond to atone for his sins. Lovers of Traditional Steam Baths Launch Counteroffensive

By Dan Fisher

MOSCOW, Oct. 24 — The men stood on benehes, up where the steam was so hot that it threatened the hair of anyone foolish enough to go bare-headed. They beat each other — on bare ebests, backs and legs — with leafy bundles of birch or maple twigs.

Others below threw bucket after bucket of water into a huge brick oven until the steam became so bot in the tiered room that it drove even the boldest down from the Afterward they cooled off in a Romanesque indoor pool with mar-ble columns and a stone fountain before moving to the auditorium-sized main bath, where they lay on stone benches. There they snoozed while companions soaped them from head to foot. Then it was into the shower, or one of the three deep, hot, sunken tubs at the end of the room, before returning to the parilka (steam room) to begin the whole process all over again.

Later they adjourned to the elegant changing room, where they enjoyed a pedicure or simply sat with their towels draped around them like togas, drinking beer, munching on vobla (dried fish) and chatting under the carved wooden rafters supporting the 30-foot ceiling.

Morning Bath

It was a weekday morning. More than 200 men, mostly in their 20s, 30s, and 40s, were whiling away the hours as their Russian ancestors have done since the 11th century. They were enjoying a banya, or public bath, at the 175-year-old Sandunovsky Baths in central Mos-

Russia without public baths would be like London without pubs. Yet they are threatened today - by a combination of official oe-glect and the encroachment of the Finnish-style sauna.

A sauma is based on dry hear rather than the wet steam of the Russian banya. It is much smaller, usually holding 12 persons or fewer at one time; scores can crowd into a parilka.

Today people like saunas because they have snob appeal," observes Volodya, a young Russian professional man. They're foreign and different. Everyone likes to feel that he's among the privileged."

In Kiev, capital of the Soviet Ukraine, the city's consumer services administration decided to eliminate banyas in favor of saunas. This country's most modern hotels, like the Viru in Tallian, capital of Soviet Estonia, and the tourist center in the ancient city of Suzdal northeast of Moscow, boast of saunas, not banyas.
The number of banyas in Mos-

The threat has become severe enough for lovers of the old-style Russian steam bath to launch a counteroffensive. So many Muscovites complained about the lack of new banyas and the neglect of older ones that Dep-uty Mayor B.N. Sepanov finally dged last summer that the city will build nine new public baths in districts that now have none, and that it will rebuild 10 others. At least two newspapers have publicly criticized officials for conditions in the baths.

A Pravda correspondent wrote from Kiev that "Going to a steam hath is not as simple as it once was in this city. The luckless bather finds one bathhouse closed for repairs, another closed for lack of steam, another for lack of water. And when he eventually succeeds in finding ooe open, more likely than not it is filthy and full of people drinking or doing their laundry.

And now a Russian doctor has established scientifically that after 10 minutes in a steam room a man emerges 3 percent stronger and with I4 percent more endurance than he had when he

The author also quoted an un-named Finnish doctor as suggesting that "saunas may be carcinogenic, and therefore maybe Russian steam is better."

Civic Necessity

The public baths were a civie necessity here for many years. A ritualistic Saturday visit to the local banya is still the only alternative to a chilly dip in a nearby river in much of the rural Soviet Union, where bome indoor plumbing remains a dream for the future.

The banyas have separate sections for men and women. The San-dunovsky Baths bost about 600 men and 150 women daily.

Women go to the baths "to be beautiful," the Moscow secretary said. "Some people gn to church and talk with a priest. They think afterwards they are very clean and ready to start a new life," she said. For some Moscow women, the banya is the same thing."

RANDSBURG, Calif. — Turtle lovers have paid $60,000 for 24 square miles of undeveloped desert to set the land aside as a sanctuary

The Pheasant on Display: Fair Game for the Nobility

IT IS possible that the most lavish feast in history was the one given in 1543 in Lille, one of his Flemish fieldoms by Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, it has gone down in social and gastronomic history as the Banquet of the Vow of the Pheasant. Its high point occurred when a long file of servitors entered, each carrying a salver to which a live pheasant was tethered; the bearers stationed themselves before the knights present, each of whom swore solemly by the pheasant and before God to abstain from whatever action his imagination totald conjure up — not to sleep in a bed, not to change his clothes — until Constantinople had been taken back from the Saracens, who had just baptured it.

This well fed mobilization of Christian chivalry was the sensa-tion of Western Europe, but after the fevered emotions of the moment, fed by much good food and wine, had faded away, sober second thoughts prevailed, and in the end neither the duke himself not any of the knights who had taken the oath federal it expedient to affront the Seraceus. Thus if Philip the Good's object had been to recover Constantinople, it must be indeed that the Resource of the Vorence of the Voren judged that the Banquet of the Vow of the Pheasant had failed; but its magnificence was such that it-was a spectacular success if Philip's real aim, as some malicious gossipers insinuated, had been to demon-strate that the duke of Burgundy was richer and more powerful than the king of France — at that moment Charles VII, whose control over his kingdom had dwindled to such an extent that he had been nicknamed sarcastically "the king of the Bourges."

But why the pheasant? Swearing by a pheasant was ritualized in the Middle Ages, according to some because the pheasant was so ooble bird ("the king of feathered ame," said the 19th century French gastronomic writer, Robert Robert) that it was a fit custodian of the pledges of human nobility. This associatioo between avian and buman blue-bloodedness seems to have been accepted by the anony-mous author of "Le Menagier Parisien" (1393), who composed a menu for a formal dinner including pbeasant for the nobles." There was no dearth of pheasants at the time and they were consequently not luxuries in the sense of being expensive (though in 14th-century England a pheasant cost as much as a sheep, and not until Elizabethan times would a pheasant be

A second possible reason that swearing by a pheasant was consid-ered appropriate when it was a are pheasants here twice as large as treated in an everyday cookbook, question of making a vow to fight in the Hold Land was that the Holy Land was in the east, and the pheasant represented the east, the region from which it came. Poets let nobody forget that by their paraphrase for the name of the pheasant, as, for instance, in Voltaire's "Henriade": "The bird of the Phasis is a dish for the gods." The word "pheasant" is derived from Phasis, which for the ancients from Asia. That would not be our view, for the Phasis, which is now called the Rion, runs into the eastern end of the Black Sea from the Georgian Socialist Soviet Republic, the ancient Colchis, which is the reason the scientific name of the typical species of pheasant is Phasianus colchicups. According to legend, Jason and his Argonants, who sailed for home, after capturing the Golden Fleece, down the Phasis er atarting point would seem to be India, rich in representatives of the 20 genera and 48 species of this family, including the peacock, almost a pheasant, and the Indian jungle fowl, the ancestor of all our domestic chickens. The French also have a special term to recognize another phenomenon of the pheasant, faison coquard, cocklike pheasant, which means a hen which, having passed egg-laying age, begins to take on the plumage of the male.

"The pheasant, it seems," wrote Elizabeth David, "is a bird which inspires fantasies in the kitchen," and it was not the ancient Romans who could be expected to pass up an opportunity for fantasy in that domain. Their mildest treatment of the bird was to skin it carefully, cook it then tuck it back into its feathers for serving - worth the trouble, they felt, since the beasant's plumage was so bril-

The pre-Jason range of the pheasant is usually given as from the Caucasus to Japan, but there are birds closely related to it in West Africa, notably the guinea hen, and fossil remains support a theory that in Miocene times pheasant-like birds existed all the way from eastern Asia to western Africa, but for some reason (presumably climatic changes) Phasianidae in the center of this area became extinct, leaving as sur-vivors only the birds on the two

This Asiatic bird did not exist in pre-Columbian America. It does now, in 34 states, where it has adapted itself more successfully than any other imported game bird.

The accepted story is that an American consul in Shangai estab-lished some Chinese ring-tailed pheasants on his farm in Oregoo in 1881, and that a little later hybrid pheasants were introduced into New England, and that it is from these birds of the 1880s that those so plentiful today are descended. Perhaps: But Eliza Leslie's "Direction for Cookery in its Various Branches" gives two recipes for roast pheasant; and she has not used this word for the wrong bird, for she speaks separately of the grouse and the partridge, identified as different.

She was then in conflict with the most venerated dictators of European gastronomy, but Europe has since caught up with her. In the 18th century Gri mod de la Reyniere had said that "pheasant should be waited for like a governmental pension by a writer who has never flattered anybody." In the 19th century Brillat-Sava. rin wrote that "every substance has its apoget of excellence, some when they begin to decay like the pheasant. Eaten within the three days which follow its death, nothing distinguishes it; it is neither as delicate as a pullet nor as tasty as a quail." Let us grant him three days' delay, but elsewhere he advocated waiting to eat pheasant until its breast meat turns green. Nobody dares disagree with Brillat-Savarin nowadays, but in his own time he was criticized as more of a theoretician than as a practician, and in this case, at least, time has passed with him by.

him by.
Today French gournets oppose the hanging of game, and some of the better Parisian restaurants carry on their menus a notice that they do oot follow this practice.

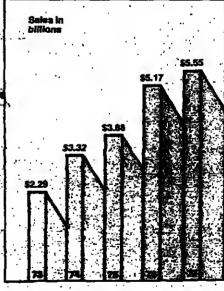

Decomposed or not, pheasant is, in the almost unaumous opinion, the finest of game birds. I would be inclined myself to make an exception for Scotch grouse, but that is a rare bird, while the pheasant is well established all over the world.

I personally prefer pheasant roasted in the simplest possible form rather than as an ingredient in 140 elaborate dishes. (Here I rejoin are Brillat-Savarin, who said that trui-fles do nothing for pheasants). I do oot want the subtle flavor of the bird smothered by other tastes. This is valid, of course, only for tender young birds, killed no later than December of the year in which they were hatched; old birds require more complicted treatment of their flesh is dry. To find out if a bird offered you is really a young one, press the beak and the area above the breast-bone. If it is a har. above the breast-bone. This is the gist of remarks made at a news conference by U.S deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury Gary Hufbaner. The U.S proposals presented at a meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development call for an increase of between 0.25 and 0.75 percentage points in interest rates for officially supported sales, and seek to broaden the coverage to aircraft, shipping — including LNG tankers, nuclear power plants and agricultural commodities.

Emminger Repeats Warnings

BADEN-BADEN, West Germany, Oct. 24 (AP-DJ) — Bundesbank president Ormar Emminger repeated his warnings today of the need for action to avoid a premature death of a widened European Monetary System. He said inflation differences between countries must be basically changed so that the new EMS would have more than just a one-or two-year period of stability. From experience with the present system, he said, it is clear that a widened EMS under the same "snake" rules of intervention and only moderate adaption of credit mechanisms "can bring with it great problems."

Mr. Emminger noted that the Bundesbank has been forced since the end of July to increase liquidity 10 billion Deutsche marks through support purchases of snake currencies, before the mark was revalued a little over a week ago. Therefore, he said, participants should consider secondary such matters as con-siderations about using a currency basket as an indicator of deviation in rates and talks involving expanded credit facilities.

U.K. Unemployment Off LONDON, Oct. 24 (AP-DJ) — British unemployment for October totaled 1,429,502 persons or 6 per-cent of the workforce, down 88,161 persons or 0.4 percentage point from a month earlier, the Depart-ment of Employment said today. Seasonally adjusted, October un-employment fell to 5.7 percent from 5.8 percent a month earlier and to 6.1 percent in October 1977.

Bilingual Breakthrough

A Computer Translator Puts Action Into Words

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (AP-DJ) — A small California company will soon introduce a computer designed to aid human workers in language

Ordinarily, the best human translator can handle about 600 words in hour. With the help of the new machine, one can translate more than four times that hourly volume, according to the manufacturer, Weidner Communication Systems Inc., of La Jolla.

Initially, the machine, known as the Multi-Lingual Word Processing System, will be offered in a Spanish to English version. It is being developed to handle up to 10 languages, including Russian, Japanese, Hebrew and Arabic. A machine able to aid four translators at the same time will sell for about $150,000.

2-Language Dictionary

The device is a word-processing machine, an electronic typewriter linked to a video screen and a Digital Equipment PDP 11-32 minicomputer. In the computer's memory are stored a two-language dictionary, a table of synonyms and a grammar. When a foreign language is typed on the keyboard, the machine displays a word-by-word literal translations of the synonyms and a grammar. tion on the screen. The translator, acting as an editor, examines this preliminary version of the text and makes changes where necessary, again using the keyboard.

Demand for Oil Seen Up in U.S. HOUSTON, Oct. 24 (AP-DJ) -

U.S. demand for petroleum products should climb to a record 19.4 millioo barrels a day oext year, despite a predicted slowdown in the growth rate of the nation's economy, an oil industry study group

The prediction by the supply and demand committee of the Independent Petroleum Association of America would be 2.1 percent above 1978 demand, which is expected to average 18.9 million bar-rels a day, or 3 percent above 1977 figures, the committee said yesterday at the annual meeting of the 5,000-member trade group.

The committee predicted that oil imports would begin to climb again next year as domestic crude pro-duction begins to level off. The committee projects production from Alaska's North Slope will level off oext year at about 1.13 million barrels a day, only slightly above the current level. Combined with anticipated growth to demand, such a trend will require additional imported oil, the study group said.

Boeing in Talks With China on 747's

Bocing currently is holding talks with China on the sale of loog-range 747 jetliners for additions to China's civil air fleet. Boeing chairman T.A. Wilson says "I don't know, I genuinely don't know whether Boeing will get a contract to supply these planes to China." He declined to say how many 747s were involved in the discussions, but he notes the sale of even one 747 would be "big order," adding that Boeing's competitors in the international aircraft industry also are trying to sell planes to the Chinese. .

VW Brasil Plans to Produce Mopeds

Volkswagen do Brazil and Steyr-Daimler-Puch have agreed to set up a joint Brazilian company to develop and produce mopeds, according to VW Brazil chairman Wolfgang Sauer. He says investment is put at 30 million Deutsche marks and that the com-pany will be 51-percent owned by VW Brazil and 49 percent by Steyr-Daimler-Puch. Annual production capacity is expected to reach 100,000 mopeds by 1981.

We grewat a record rate last year. Doing things no other banking institution can do.

Inlike any other banking institution in the world, the Merrill Lynch International Banking Group offers commercial and investment banking services in all the international capital markets outside the U.S., plus direct access to long-term capital in the U.S.

This unique international banking capability, coupled with Merrill Lynch's worldwide securities distribution and trading power, was no doubt decisive in helping the Group achieve its solid record of growth in 1977.

International public issues: $2.8 billion

International public issues managed or co-managed by Merrill Lynch amounted to $2.8 billion in 1977 versus $2.2 billion in 1976, an increase of 25%.

The total financing Merrill Lynch helped arrange for corporate or governmental clients in the U.S., Canada and worldwide amounted to over $30 billion in 1977.

Syndicated bank loans: $1.3 billion

Supported by a substantial increase in capital resources devoted to banking, we managed or co-managed $1.3 billion in syndicated bank loans during 1977, a notable increase over the $140 million of managerships in 1976. Commercial loans to corporate and governmental clients grew from $63 million in 1976 to $204 million at year-end 1977.

Eurodollar securities trading: $3.25 billion

In 1977, Merrill Lynch's International Banking Group trading volume in the Eurobond secondary markets was 62% greater than 1976.

Mergers and acquisitions

The Group's contacts make it an important source of merger and acquisition candidates around the globe. Merrill Lynch assisted in 47 projects involving mergers, acquisitions, divestitures or tender offers in 1977.

Merrill Lynch International & Co., Merrill Lynch International Bank Ltd., Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc., Merrill Lynch Government Securities Inc., and Merrill Lynch Royal Securities Ltd. are members of the Mertill Lynch & Co., Inc. group of companies. # oybean Yields

Held Best in '78 or U.S. Farms

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (AP-DJ) — rop scientists say that for most. S. farmers, last year's soybear op likely will be the best one they ill harvest until perhaps 1985.

Freakishly good 1977 growing ather lifted national average soyan yields last fall to a record 30.6 shels an acre, the Agriculture seers an scre, the Agriculture epartment reported recently, urring a fluke or an unexpected search breakthrough, researchers y it may be six years or longer fore yields reach those levels

Soybean growing problems in me places are multiplying faster an solutions, the scientists add soybean production has been aring, but mostly because plant-is have tripled since 1950, rather in because recent yields are highDemand for the protein-rich seed has boomed, too. The world terally uses about all that is proced each year, mostly in the tited States and Brazil. With U.S. mland at a premium, yields are reasingly important.

Feed-Grain Supplies Up

I THINK WE CAN COME TO A DECISION RIGHT NOW. WE'LL SEND YOU 500 IN ASSORTED COLORS." YES? WHICH COLOR DON'T YOU WANT? HMM YOU REALIZE THAT MEANS WE'LL HAVE TO REPACKAGE .... ADDS TO OUR COST. YES. WELL, LOOK DOWN THE COLUMN THAT SAYS BROKEN PACKAGES'. UH-HUH, ... TOO HIGH? TELL YOU WHAT, SINCE IT'S A QUANTITY ORDER, I'M WILLING TO SPLIT THE DIFFERENCE OVER THE PRICE ORIGINALLY QUOTED. YES ?... OKAY YOU'LL GET ALL THE COLORS. EXCEPT THE BLUE, WELL, WHEN I TALKED TO YOUR MR. PETRIE HE SAID IT WAS ALL RIGHT, OH YES, I TALKED TO HIM. SAID YOU HAVE ENOUGH IN STOCK. ENOUGH TO HOLD YOU FOR AWHILE, SAID TO TELL YOU IF YOU HAD ANY DOUBTS, UH-HUH. OH, OF COURSE, YOU'RE IN A BIND? WE'LL GET THAT ORDER ON A PLANE TONIGHT, RIGHT. WE HAVE WORK THANK YOU, TO DO FETCH TOADY! FETCH © 800TH 197*8*

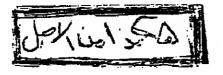

Do you need details...a decision right now...give-and-take? Then it's the telephone to the U.S.A.

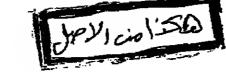

You won't wait hours—or even overnight—for an answer as you must with other means of communications. Right on the spot you can explore, persuade, explain-and close the sale. The cost isn't much when you consider the results.

NAPPY EDGES

ON AN afternoon in September, 1976, being on holiday in New York City and momentarily tired of sightseeing, I strolled into the Booth Theater to watch a maninee production of which I knew nothing but that its author was a young, black woman and that its title was vaguely pretentious and far too long to far too long to remember. An hour or so later I emerged stunned, awestruck and exhilarated by the power and beauty of Ntozake Shaoge's "For Colored Girls Who Have Coos i d e r e d Suicide/When the Rainbow is Enuf." Immediately, as must have done thousands of others who saw the show, I sought out and bought a book of the poems from which it had been created. Puhlished by the Shameless Hussy Press, its pages were unevenly stapled and the type seemed to be escaping from the bottom and sides of the paper; its bewildered, unready appearance was not dissimilar from that of an actress in jeans and no make-up who has just learned that she has become an overnight star. But was she a star? Without the direction, the choreography and the performances of the stage version; away from Broadway, the lights and the infectious enthusiasm of the audience; weeks later, in the grey of an English winter, to what did the poetry of "For Colored

Seafaring Dated To 9,000 B.C. in Mediterranean

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 24 (UPI) — Seafaring oo the Mediterranean began about 11,000 years ago, in the late Paleolithic era two millenia earlier than previous estimates — archeologists working in a Greek cave have decided. The discovery substantially alters the traditional image of early man as a primitive hunter and gatherer.

Franchthi Cave on the Argolid peninsula has been the site of more than a decade of intensive research hy the Argolid Exploration Project, a joint venture of Indiana and Pennsylvania universities and researchers from around the world.

The researchers say the recent discovery about seafaring is signifi-cant oot only because it helps reconstruct prehistoric lifestyles, but also because it will alert other ar-cheologists to the importance of studying the marine components of civilizations similar to those in the

It even con-tains three or four of the earlier tains three or four of the earlier poems, in slightly altered form. It is, however, a beavier, denser book not only literally — being approximately five times as long as its predecessor — but, also — owing to a new weight, a new seriousness and, unfortunately, at times a new posserity — figuratively as well pomposity — figuratively, as well. The three introductory pieces and several of the poems themselves are several of the poems the hloated almost beyond readability by Shange's current self-consciousness of herself as a celebrity and as an ambassador of black, feminist

I do say "almost," however, because nothing that she writes is ever entirely unreadable, springing, as it does, from such an intense honesty. from so fresh an awareness of the from so fresh an awareness of the beauty of sound and of vision, from such mastery of words, from such compassion, humor and intelli-gence. From this soil, no matter how entangled and confused they might grow, or how much pruning they might oeed, the plants must always be healthy.

Self-Conscious

And those many poems in "Nap-py Edges" whose power has oot be-come enmeshed in self-consciousness (the rhapsodic songs of love; the living portraits; the lethal and witty attacks, the observations of male society, white society, hypocrisy and mediocrity) are at least as potent, impressive and astonishing as any in "For Colored Girls."

Shange's oew book is crowded with such joys. That the reader must occasionally push through overgrowth in order to find them is due to no lack on Shange's part but rather to an over-abundance — of talent, energy, cultural resources, ambitioo and daring. All of these are qualities which, in a world too full of either careful, or careless. facile writers, should be gratefully, thankfully welcomed.

At the alfway point of the NFL season, he Seattle Seahawks and even the ampa Bay Buccaneers are also layoff contenders, as bizarre as hat may sound.

The magic words for the fans of less team are "wild card." The IFL has opened up its playoff system this season to 10 clubs by add-18 a second wild-card team from ach conference. The Giants would make the playoffs because their 5-3 record would be the fifth best in the conference. Only 5 of the 14 NFC teams have records above .500.

Scheduling Is All

Half a season remains, of course. So the degree of difficulty of future schedules becomes of paramount importance, and by comparing these future foes the chances of Seattle and Tampa Bay, the last two expansion teams, become possible if not plausible. Their records are now 4-4, and the Senhawks' future opponents have a combined record of 26-28, or .406. Five of Seattle's eight coming opponents have losing records. If Seattle wins those five games plus one more, finishing with a 10-6 record, its wild-card chances are excellent. Of the probable playoff teams, the Cowboys have the most diffi-cult schedule for the remainder of the season, playing teams whose winning percentage is .622. None and Redskins meet in Dallas.

- San Diego, Kansas City, Cincinnati and Detroit. Hard Times Ahead

In the AFC, the Jets have the most difficult future schedule among playoff contenders. They will face teams whose present winning percentage is .609, and only one has a losing record. Then it is Miami, 603 and two opponents with losing records; Denver, .555 and two; New England, .540 and three; Pittsburgh, .410 and four; Seattle, .406 and five, and Oakland, .375 and four.

In the NFC the playoff contender (except for Dallas) with the most difficult set of opponents is Green Bay. The Packers must play teams that have a .577 winning percent-age, and only one of eight has a losing record. Then come Los Angeles, .500 and two losing opponents; Tampa Bay, 500 and four; Minnesota, 453 and four; the Giants, 437 and three, and Washington,

422 and four. The race in the East between Dallas and Washington is interesting because the Cowboys, who won their last two games, have such a tough schedule remaining, and the Redskins, who have lost their last two, have such an easy schedule. The decisive game will come on

2 Russians Lead Comaneci

STRASBOURG, France, Oct. 24 (AP) — Nadia Comanect, Romania's Olympic triple gold medalist, seemed overshadowed today by a rising group of Soviet stars in the team competition of the world gymnastics championship

The Russians seemed likely to retain the team title they have held since 1966 as the Romanian trailed by nearly two points — 194 to 192.20. The final rounds of competition are scheduled Thursday.

Comaneci, 16, about 4 inches taller and 20 pounds heavier than at the 1976 Olympics, took third place in the compulsory figures.

Officials, who earlier had her tied for third, upgraded her score on the vault from 9.70 to 9.75 for an aggregate of 38.95 of a possible 40 points. Elena Mukhina, 18, a Russian, dropped out of the rie and into fourth place with 38.90 points.

reserves Steve Mix and Joe Bryant, prefer to release downcourt on the fast break. That leaves the bulk of the rebounding to the centers; Dar-ryl Dawkins might someday be able to handle the task, but he has yet to win the starting spot from Caldwell

Muscle is precisely the reason Denver traded Jones, acknowledged as one of the most complete players in the game, for McGinnis. Since center Dan Issel gets by marily on experience and a fine shooting touch, the Nuggets felt that if they were to break out of their rut — win the division title, lose in the playoffs—they had to have a big rebounding forward. So far it has worked well. The Nuggets have scored 125 points or more in each of their last three games, in one game hitting a re-markable 67 per cent of their shots. But while McGinnis may solve Denver's rebounding and scoring problems, he is not close to Jones on defense. What's more, with Charlie Scott in the backcourt instead of Bobby Wilkerson, the Nuggets now have five offensive-minded regulars. That may be fine during the regular season, but when the playoffs come, a club that doesn't play defense is in trouble.

The hotel management, sounding mortally wounded, denied the charges. Indeed, it seemed as if it had innocently wandered into the crossfire between Israel's constantly warring chief rabbis.

The problem goes back to early this year, when the city rabbinate wrested control of supervision of the dietary laws from Israel's Ashkenazi chief rahhi. To assert his authority, Jerusalem Chief Rabbi Bezalal Zolti cracked down on the Hilton, charging that unhled meat was found in the

Making a Commercial Is Becoming As Natural as Signing an Autograph

By Bradley Graham

JERUSALEM (WP) — At last. Israel. But here, remember, it's every mother of "my son, the McDavid's, not McDonald's. McDavid's recently opened its doors on one of Tel Aviv's busiest corners and is an undisguised copy of the U.S. fast-food chain. It is the brainchild of David Magen, who was so impressed with McDonald's on a U.S. visit that he "just decided to use my own name and copy their

A spokesman for McDonald's in Chicago, unamused, said the company is pursuing an international trademark infringement action. Neither are many of the ham-

Eddie's, a favorite of Jerusalemites. serves bacon-and-cheese hurgers, so everyone knows how kosher that one is. Uncle Sam's, an aggressive nearby competitor, is ko-sber and makes much of its soft, U.S. style rolls and french fries. The Tavern, an old establishment with a new hamburger recipe, is cornering a share of the growing fad, and a new deli downtown with hot dogs and hamburgers is coming on strong.

Outside of hamburger joints, Chinese restaurants are now the hottest things in town. In the past two months, half a dozen have sprung up, along with a small hut growing Chinese community.

Mandy's, an enterprise of Mandy Rice-Davies of Britain's mid-1960s Profumo-scandal fame, had cornered the market for years with Chinese restaurants bere and in Tel Aviv. Now others are competing.

The Sinbad, once an Arab restaurant opposite Herod's Gate to the Old City, is now, incongruous-ly, Sinbad Chinese Restaurant. Chung Ching, located on the edge of a gasoline station in the Yefe Nof quarter, seems assured of success — for religious if not culinary reasons: Its most prominent decoration is its kosher certificate, proudly displayed near the entrance. Now and then, disbelieving customers squint at the fine print, and even trek upstairs to the WASHINGTON (WP) — That sincere glance, that wobbly voice which rings with righteousness and soothes with compassion - these are the trademarks of actor Jimmy Stewart. He won hearts with them in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." He triumphed with them in "The Spirit of St. Louis." And now he's using them to sell Firestone products on coast-to-coast U.S.

U.S. television.

Between innings of a World Series telecast, people in the United States noticed another familiar face in an unfamiliar context. Danny Kaye was struting his naturally sparkling stuff into a commercial for Polaroid's new instant movie camera.

Then there is the meanest of the mean guys, the rawest of the raw, the most brutish of the brutes — longstanding bully Richard Widmark, whose tough-guy image is currently on sale by a battery company.

They used to be the holdouts, the ones who'd never do a commercial - ever, period. There was something cheap, almost pro-miscuous about hawking one's carefully-nurtured image to peddle a product, they used to say. It was barely regarded as act-ing; it certainly wasn't considered artistic; and it definitely wasn't acceptable in the circles one aspired to.

Changing Standards

But standards of art and acceptability have a way of changing with the times. And lately stars of stage, screen, stadium and po-litical soap box bave been singing a slightly different tune.

Sammy Davis Jr., for instance, has been burhling the Alka Seltzer jingle; Ella Fitzgerald's voice has shattered glass for Memorex; and Smokin' Joe Frazier bas been knocking 'em out (sort of) for Miller Lite. Making a commercial has become as mucb a commonplace of stardom as signing autographs. It has also become fashionable, or nearly so — and for less than you'd think.

"It would be good press to put in that everybody is making a million hucks, but that's just not true," says Marty Ingels, a Hollywood celebrity broker wbo specializes in reaching unreachable people, "We do a lot of deals for less than $100,000 with wellknown names,

Hope Lange . . .fattening commercial.

Citrus, which pays Bryant to push fresh orange juice, commissioned a spate of sur-veys which determined, albeit inconclusive-ly, that the campaign seemed to be having only a minimal impact on juice sales.

Once in a while, a featured celebrity does something naughty. For instance, Jane Russell, the well-endowed film actress who promotes bras for International Playtex Inc., raised more than eyebrows among her sponsors when she recently pleadedd guilty to a drunk-driving charge.

There's no sure way to avoid such embarrassments. But sponsors can minimize them by relying on more than a single star to carry their messages. American Express, for nstance, constantly changes the mix of celebrities who promote the company's credit

One other worry that commercials-conscious celebriues now have to fret about: the Federal Trade Commission. The agency re-cently adopted a tough endorsement policy that requires anyone who endorses a product to make a "reasonable inquiry" into the product's proported claims.

The first victim of the policy was singer Pat Boone, whom the FTC staff accused of falsely stating that a product called Acne-Statin could cure acne and was better than other remedies. Boone settled out of court several months ago, agreeing to contribute to any restitution the manufacturer of Acne-Statin might be ordered to make.

The case sent scared the daylights out of the ad industry and threatened to scare the stars out of commercials altogether. But much of the initial nervousness over the FTC's action bas subsided, though some celehrities are taking special care to check out the products they speak up for.

Said Hollywood's Ingels, "I know of one case involving Hope Lange, the actress, who was negotiating to do a spot for a meat product. She asked to taste all the company's products, Eighty-five pounds came in a giant refrigerated crate. For three days, she ate everything in it. She finally did the ad, hut I was convinced when she left to do the commercial sbe was too fat for it."

'Stone's' Sentence: PEOPLE: Concert for the Blind

In Toronto, Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richard, convicted of possessing heroin, was given a one-year suspended sentence and ordered to give a benefit performance for the blind. County Court Judge Lloyd Graburn also ordered the millionaire rock star to continue treatment for heroin addiction at a private psychiatric clinic in New York, and placed Richard on a year's probation. He ruled that he must report twice a year to a probation officer and submit medical retion officer and submit medical reports on his drug treatment. Gra-hurn told Richard to arrange within six months of the begin-ning of his probation" a benefit performance — either solo or with a band of his choice — at the Cana-dian National Institute of the Blind in Toronto. Richard had pleaded guilty to simple possession of heroin. The crown prosecutor then withdrew charges of possession of heroin for the purpose of traffick-ing — which could have sent him to prison for life — and a charge of possession of cocaine.

Maya Plisetskaya, the 52-year-old prima ballerina of the Bolshoi theater who bas thrilled audiences for over a decade, is suffering from arthritis so acute it could end her career, the theater's director said in Moscow. "Whether she will retire is a question only she can answer," Georgy Ivanov said; she is under treatment in a sanatorium and won't return to Moscow until November at the earliest. There are no plans now for ber to appear in any of this season's ballets. The public acknowledgement that Mrs. Plisetskaya is seriously ill follows a disastrous August tour by the Bol-shoi Theater Ballet in Argentina. where she canceled her appearance at the last minute.

A U.S. women's team has conquered Annapurna I, but a U.S. male team has abandoned its attempt to climb the 24,787-foot mountain Annapurna III. Expedition leader Steve Van Meter, 23, of Santa Barbara, Calif., told Nepal's ministry of tourism that after reaching 21,600 feet, his fellowclimbers "chose not to go on the last section" of the mountain's west ridge. He identified the other members of the group as Greg Sapp, 22, of New York City and Ed Comnor, 36, and Werner Landry, 32, both of San Diego, Calif. "The summit was a long distance from there. They were extremely exhausted," Van

It takes more than a beart flutter to make Bob Hope break a goll date. The 75-year-old comedian was felled briefly Monday in Cin-cinnati by what the doctors call "cardiac rhythm disturbance." It occurred while be was appearing on the Bob Braun Show, where he had gone to discuss Hope House — a home he's founded for juvenile delinquents. Hope shrugs off the attack, calling it fatigue, and says he still intends to play today in a Florida golf tournament.

The people of Trinidad were jusnifiably proud when bometown beauty Penny Janelle Commissiong was crowned Miss Universe last year, but now they want ber bome, To lure her back to Port-of-Spain, a government spokesman says she's being offered a state job — as a school guidance counselor. The 25-year-old Miss Commissiong has higher aspirations — says she wants to become a fashion buyer — but the position back home may be tempting. The government says she'll only have to work as a counselor two days a week at a monthly salary of $600.
